Andrew Lowe spent most of his working life as a Senior Planner for the Lake District National Park and later as Buildings Conservation Officer. In this capacity he was involved in a variety of conservation projects concerning historic buildings, towns and villages.

Andrew has spent many years lecturing about Lake District traditional buildings and Industrial Archaeology. The talk looks at a range of buildings constructed over the last 500 years that we admire and appreciate in order to help understand the influences that shaped their style and appearance.

Visitors are welcome at £2.50 including refreshments

Next talk 11th March by our President, Dr Angus Winchester:- 'Personal Names and Cumbrian History'
