MEMORIAL AND MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS AT ST. CUTHBERT'S CHURCH AND CHURCHYARD. Church of England Parish of Lorton, Cumbria

Introduction

Credits. These inscriptions at St. Cuthbert's Church and Churchyard in Lorton, Cumbria, were recorded at various times over the years through the efforts and research of many people, most particularly Angus Winchester, Ted Petty, Elsie Reed, and Ron George. Heather Thompson and Ellen Bentsen continued the project from 1996 to 1998, adding additional information up to April 1999. Up to 2013 the late Ted Gilbertson, and Evelyn Gilbertson, checked and corrected the inscriptions in areas A and B. At 2020 the inscriptions in area C are being checked and corrected. The team are indebted to George Robson, Joe Lister, and the late Jack Norman for their advice, assistance, and encouragement, and to Lorton Parochial Church Council for the use of burial records. The accompanying plan was designed by Heather Thompson and developed by Michael Grieve. Copyright is vested in the Society, and this document is provided for personal use only.

Content. This document is primarily a verbatim record of the inscriptions, as read by the various contributors. It has been checked, corrected, and added to where necessary, accepting that as time passes some of the oldest inscriptions become less readable. It is up to date as at June 2020. As a record of inscriptions, this is not necessarily an accurate record of those interred in the churchyard, for which the records of burials in the parish registers should be consulted. Many people remembered in the inscriptions, and particularly in family plots, were interred elsewhere, sometimes in unmarked graves in this churchyard, and more frequently in other places. This is not always apparent from the inscriptions. For example see No.83, where the first mentioned family principal, Joshua Lucock Bragg, died in Lorton but was interred in Cockermouth.

In addition to the inscriptions, this document includes many people who were interred in a known plot but who have no grave marker. This was made possible in Area C, where the work was greatly helped by a grid plan documented in the 1980s by Myles Huck, Church Warden, of burials from current and historical records.

A history of the Church, by the late Ron George, Church Warden and Chair of the Society, can be found at <http://derwentfells.com/pdfs/sources/LortonChurchGeorge1995.pdf>, including (page.1) the extension of the graveyard from its old curvilinear form to its present extent through two grants of land. In the old part of the churchyard there will be many burials which are unmarked, some of which will be recorded in the burial register, some of which will have been recorded on parts of the register which have been lost, and many of which will predate the burial register.

In the seventeenth century and before, some of the upper yeomanry were granted the privilege of being buried inside the Church. Any grave markers that existed have been lost. This would apply to some of the principal Winder family. The 'Winder Vault' is spurious.

Index I lists house names and place names as they appear on the grave markers, followed by their location number in the text and on the churchyard plan. Not all inscriptions include house and place names.

Index II lists the surnames that appear on the grave markers or, if in Area C and there is no marker, in the church records, followed by their location number in the text and on the churchyard plan.

Methodology. Surnames are shown in bold-face type; parentheses enclose words, letters, dates, or numbers that are probable but illegible; blank spaces indicate illegible or missing text; slashes indicate end of lines on grave markers; square brackets enclose explanatory text or, at the end of some entries, the stonemason's name if inscribed. A burial site without a grave marker is designated [no grave marker] followed by the name(s) given in church records of the graveyard. In many cases, these names appear on family grave markers elsewhere in the churchyard (see surname in Index II for location in the text and on the churchyard plan). If a grave marker bears text but no name, we used church records as the source of that name. Numbers with no text following them indicate a space in the churchyard. The plan divides the churchyard into three sections: Area A (the plot on which the church stands to the gated path), Area B (the middle ground, between the two paths), and Area C (the land on the far side of the middle path). For Areas A and B, the numbering starts at the front (i.e., the road-side) and goes to the back; numbering for Area C is from back to front.

A note on dates. Before 1753, in England, the calendar year started on 25th March, Lady Day, meaning that January, February and most of March were at the end of the year. The adoption of the Gregorian calendar, replacing the old Julian calendar, resulted in the start of 1753 being advanced to 1 January instead of 25 March, as well as 11 dates being 'lost' from 1752. Inscriptions on grave markers made before 1753 will generally be 'old style', which is as they knew it at the time, rather than 'new style' which gives the later year number for historical dates in the early part of the years before the change. The earliest readable death date on a grave marker is for Edward Thompson (see #137), shown as "February 16th, 1641/2". This is a dating form which means 1641 old style and 1642 new style. Because he was said to have died one hundred years before the change, this suggests that this inscription may be rather later than the burial, as could be the case with other grave markers.

This version, revised and including corrections, June 2020, by Derek Denman as editor.
